5th Annual Golf Challenge

For the fifth time in as many years, the Carl Cruze family is hosting the Cruze Family Invitational Golf Tournament.

The date and location of the 1998 golf tournament has not yet been released. Word on the street is that it will be somewhere in central Minnesota. The date is still wide open but expected to be in either June, July, or August.

Friday of that weekend will be a practice round, followed by the final round on Saturday. Bad weather could force the final round to Sunday.

To be eligible for the tournament, you need to be a descendant of Carl and Leona Cruze, or an "in-law".

Mid America awaits its 5th tournament

This year's El Niño predictions promise great weekends for both golfers and their fans.

Weather patterns last year resulted in the lowest number of fans for the Cruze Family Invitational Golf Tournament since the tournament began. Those who did come had to be confined to the clubhouse where it was much cooler. This year's well wishers are expected to be able to station themselves anywhere on the course and catch all the action.

Last year's record heat and humidity (during the practice round) kept virtually all fans and autograph seekers away. The weather was so hard on the golfers that one of them couldn't finish even the practice round.

This year's weather is expected to be much milder and tournament management is expecting what could be the best turnout yet.

bragging rights of being the first to "three-peat".

One can already sense the underlying tension in the players. When Art was asked where the tournament was going to be this year, he responded with "I don't know", and then quickly changed the subject. (Yea, sure, right!)
